Burke's "Peerage" for some reason quotes the colours of Sir Randal's arms wrongly, and Debrett's "Peerage" adds the following statement which, however, is not borne out by the officially recorded pedigrees:—"The former Baronetcy of 1620, belonging to this old Kentish family, originally called Rookehurst and later Roodertes, became apparently extinct on the demise in 1745 of Sir Walter, sixth Baronet, who left an only daughter, Jane, who married the third Duke of St. Albans. About 1775 the Duchess discovered that the descendants of Thomas, second son of the first Baronet, who had emigrated to Ireland in 1631, were in existence and seated at Britfieldstown, Robert's Cove, county Cork; and
